Confined in a Cotton Bale.

On the last day of last August the great DR. VON SENDEN'S cotton warehouse of John S. Richards, in New York, was burned and thousands of bales of cotton were destroyed. Thousands more have been lying around the vicinity of the fire, and all summer work mea have been busy tenring them open, stamping out poslists and Gents Furnishings, sible smouldering embers, and sorting the good from the bad. A number of workmen | The Great German Family Remedy were hard at work yesterday morning, when suddenly one of them gave a yell and pointed to horror to a long, gaunt something pointed in horror to a long, gaunt something figures in the appraishment of an open bale. The appraishment of an open bale. The appraishment of a partition staggered to its feet, and feebly asked for water. It fell back unconscious. The wretched being was frightful to behold. His eyes, unnaturally large, glared like those of a wild beast. His skin was yellow, and drawn over his stiff cheek-bones 21 00 like parchaent. The shrunken lips fell back from great yellow teeth. A long beard will a stiff the parchaent. 27 50 white with the cetton in it, gave him a pa-triarchal air, that changed feelings of horror to those of pity. Some water was given him, and he was lifted out of his resting-place. Strong restoratives were applied, and he was finally brought around. His first act was to suatch a crust of bread which one of the workmen had thrown away after dinner. He ate it raven ously. He was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital, where he was fed back into life, and then cleaned and washed back to humanity. The poor wretch told a horrible story. During the big strike he had quit work, and then when the strike broke he had tailed to get work. He wandered had failed to get work. He wandered around, sleeping in area-ways or the docks, and wherever he could find a night's shelter. One day while walking along Charlton street past the railroad's warehouse he noticed a hole in the wall of the building big enough for him to crawl through. So that became his lodging. He had been sleeping in his den on the night of the fire. Finding an open hole he crawled into it and found it casy though a trifle warm for summer. Durcosy, though a trifle warm for summer. During the night the fire broke out. His first impulse was to dart out through the hole, but he feared that he might be caught com-ing out and accused of setting fire to the building. While he was debating the floor above him came down with a crash, and he was buried under an avalanche of cotton. He says that after a day or two he remembered nothing more save the feeling of water trickling through the cotton on him. He could remember that for a week of his horrible imprisonment, but after that he knew nothing until yesterday morning, when one of the men struck him with a pickaxe while digging in the cotton. He gave his name as John Reese. The man is so faint and exhausted by his two-months' imprisonment that he will hardly live. As it is, the doctors, supposing the story to be true, are at a loss to understand how he should survive at

> RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.—Shortly before noon yesterday the fast express on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, six coaches, going west met with an accident twelve miles below Charleston, W. Va., in which twenty six passengers were more or less in jored, and, while none were killed outright several were seriously hurt. The accident was caused by a defective switch, over which the engine, baggage, express, and mail cars passed unharmed, but the three middle coaches, all well filled with passengors, were thrown from the track, two of which were turned completely over, one turning twice. It was fortunate that the fires had gone out in the stoves, or the loss

A freight train from Spartanburg and a passenger train from Atlanta collided at Greer's, twelve miles east of Greenville, S. C., yesterday morning. Both engineers were killed, and the total killed is variously estimated at from three to ten. The ly estimated at from three to ten.
